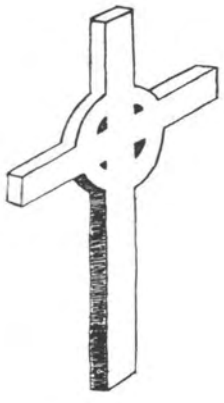
THE MOST REVEREND JAMES E. KEARNEY, D.D.
Bishop of Rochester



To the Class of 1959

My dear Men,

I am happy to avail myself of the opportunity afforded by your Year-book to bid you God-speed on the path which leads you out from your Alma Mater.

The world was never so much in need of men with your training as it is today. Today man's whole relation to the universe and to his fellow-man is changing at a pace few have really grasped. And we are still only on the threshold of undreamt-of changes. Biology and psychology are at approximately the level of theoretical development that physics was in the time of Newton. What the next century will bring only God knows.

It is certain, at least, that the technological transformation of the world is in itself good. But it unquestionably poses man with the gravest challenge he has ever faced. The more man's capacities are magnified, the greater the dangers to which the weakness of his still-human nature exposes him and his world. It is imperative, then, that man's spiritual growth should match that of his physical potentialities. It is not merely that he needs a new wisdom and a new restraint as he gains command of nuclear and genetic forces; it is not just that the terrible new capacity he possesses for dominating his fellow-man may turn his head, and put an end to freedom on the earth. It is above all the fact of knowledge, the feeling of omnipotent reach, that can make the mind of man so swell in its pride that it will set itself over against God.

The struggle which convulses the world today can, in a certain sense, be regarded as a conflict between two competing "theologies of science." One side assigns to science a Messianic role in bringing about the millennium here on earth; secularists of the West and Communists of the East agree in making scientific progress the supreme norm for man. Christianity, however, sees its millennium elsewhere, and declares that prayerful union with God is more central to human destiny than is scientific research. Nevertheless, the latter has its place too. If the Church has not always in the past been sufficiently clear as to what that place precisely is, this is certainly not true any longer. The late Holy Father has shown himself acutely aware of the role that science is playing in the transformation of man and society. Many of his addresses are devoted to this problem; the competent way in which he sets about it has won the admiration of scientists everywhere. His chief message has always been: the scientific exploration of God's creation is good, but it attains its full significance only when it reverently respects God's overlordship; the technological transmutation of the universe is good, but it must be carried out in due subordination to the Gospel precepts of charity and justice.

As you go out to face your responsibility in this age, keep always in your heart and on your lips the prayer on the seal of your Alma Mater:

"Bonitatem et disciplinam et scientiam doce me."

God bless you always.

Your devoted father in Christ,

+ James E Kearney

Bishop of Rochester

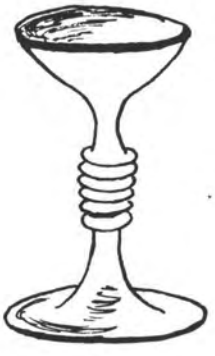
Auxiliary Bishop of Rochester

MAN, THE SOCIAL ANIMAL, is always in need of companionship. Even the most capable of mankind must turn to his fellow men for aid and assistance in his undertakings. With the increase, both population-wise and area-wise, of the diocese of Rochester, Bishop Kearney realized the necessity for a second pair of hands in the ecclesiastical administration of his diocese. It was at this time that our Bishop sought the skill and initiative of Lawrence B. Casey, consecrating him as bishop and naming him as Auxiliary Bishop of Rochester.



THE REVEREND JOHN FRANCIS MURPHY, C.S.B., Ph.D.

From the Original Portrait
By John C. Menihan

WITH GRATEFUL RECOGNITION for the accomplishments of your labors on our behalf during the past six years, we, your scholastic sons, humbly attempt to display our thanks, Father Murphy, by dedicating the 1959 Jo Roffs to you.

May you be successful in all your ensuing endeavours as you have been during your Presidency at St. John Fisher College.

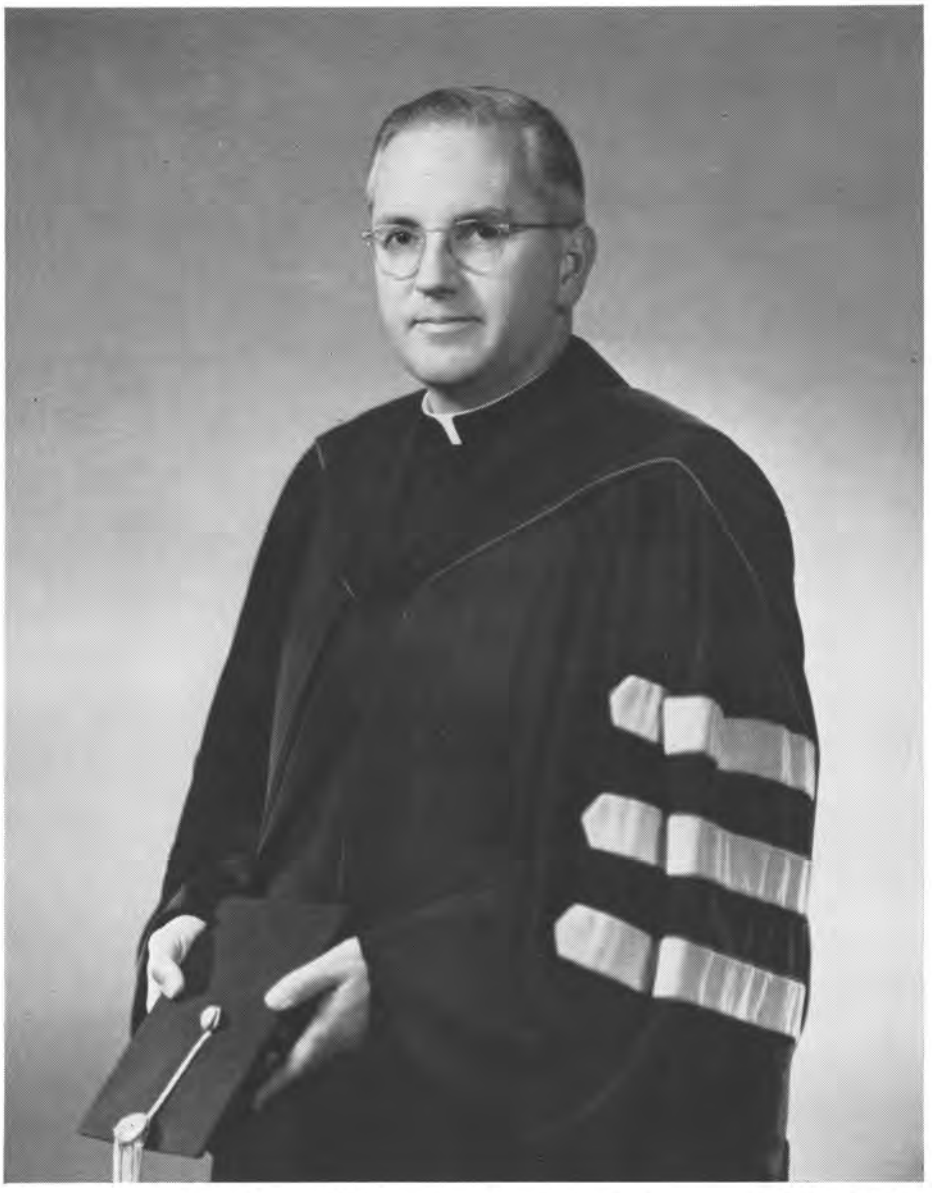
Our Prayer:

May the eternal Father continue to smile upon you and guide you through your daily tasks that they might end in heavenly reward.

May the glorious Son shine down His graces upon you and grant you a long and prosperous life.

May the Holy Spirit follow you in all your undertakings, lighting your pathway through this world and on to eternity.

Amen.



THE VERY REVEREND CHARLES J. LAVERY, C.S.B., Ph.D.
President

THE POSITION of organization president carries with it the inherent responsibility for the good of that organization. Without a doubt, the responsibility of a college president is much more than that of a corporation president in that the college president deals not so much with profit and loss statements and stockholders dividends as with human beings and their all-important character formation.

It is to this position that we, the students of St. John Fisher College, welcomed you this past Fall, Father Lavery, with all our confidence and support. May yours be a long and successful stay with us.

Dear Graduates of the Class of 1959:

You have been told — and it is true — that graduation is not the end, but rather, another beginning in your life of education. Your graduation from St. John Fisher College into a wider life means that from this moment, you are both teachers and pupils.

Your classroom will be the age of jet speed and outer space — but still God's world. In this new age which is dawning all around us — an age of electronic brains, automated life and incalculable speed, we pray that you will be ever true to your trust, and that you will be progressively masters of inner space —your own minds and wills.

We hope that you will be free men — not slaves; leaders — not followers; lovers of God — not destroyers of His Kingdom. You have been taught to shun mediocrity, and always, in humility, to seek excellence. We pray that you will not fail in this way of life. We feel that you are prepared to begin.

God bless you always.

Sincerely in Christ,

Charles J. Lavery C.S.B.

JOHN A. MURRAY, Ph.D.

But they that are learned shall shine as the brightness of the firmament: and they that instruct many to justice, as stars for all eternity. Daniel 12:3.

A GOOD TEACHER loves to teach, to share his joys of intellect with his students. John A. Murray, Professor of History at St. John Fisher College, was such a teacher. His brief span of human life was marked with a burning enthusiasm for learning and an apostolic zeal to communicate to others the desire for the limitless riches of Truth. With competence and profound conviction he served the highest spiritual and cultural interests.

A young and vibrant life, made fruitful through the discipline of illness — dedicated to God, to his family, to his pupils, to the community — this was the endowment, the ideals, out of which he gave so generously. A scholar in love with truth, he did not forget the truth of Love. An eminent teacher, he demonstrated the eminence of teaching.

St. John Fisher College will always be endebted to God for the life and love of one who with unfailing zeal followed His Way of Truth.

Board of Advisory Regents

"CATHOLIC ACTION is the participation of the laity in the apostleship of the hierarchy" (Pius XI) . . . There can be no stronger living example of this definition than that of our Advisory Board of Regents. Composed of leading Catholic men of our community, the Board has shown an active interest in the advancement of Catholic education in Rochester and neighboring areas by its support and paternal overseeing of St. John Fisher College.

The Class of 1959

SENIOR CLASS OFFICERS. Secretary Michael Judd, Vice-President Harry Burt, Treasurer William Wahl, President George Appleton.

ORIENTATION may be defined as the proper placement of ourselves—our minds and our hearts —in relation to our fellow-men. Cardinal Newman put it aptly when he wrote, "Not to know the relative disposition of things is the state of slaves and children . . .". During our stay at St. John Fisher College, we have learned, and learned well, the meaning of these words. We have grown to maturity and understanding. As we near commencement we realize, more and more, that commencement means the "beginning"— far from the end — of our intellectual growth. We shall now have the full opportunity of putting into practice those spiritual values which we have inculcated while at Fisher.

COMPANIONSHIP, in the forms of "bull" sessions, athletics, "community study periods", that quick snack between periods in the cafeteria, will be one of the memories we will cherish through many years. OUR CULTURE, our way of life, flows imminently from our considered philosophy. The Philosophy Club extends our boundaries of metaphysical thought by examining and analyzing the fields of Ethics, Epistemology, Ontology, Cosmology, Logic and other subjects of import. One of the outstanding ways in which our students are able to exercise their formed philosophies is through the Senior Counsellor group, by aiding the new student in both physical as well as mental capacities.

PRO, CON, proposition, restatement, panel . . . these words are the basic diet of the debator. Rapid and clear thought, the ability to reason constructively while facing a capable opponent, careful choice in proper word selection . . . these are but a few of the factors necessary in the composition of a fine debator. The Fisher Forum has proved its excellence again and again. Its fine collection of trophies is sufficient evidence of the Forum's abilities.

Jo Roffs

PERHAPS NO WHERE ELSE in the school program of extra-curricular activities is the trait of cooperation exhibited more profitably than in the small band of college men dedicated to the publishing of the Jo Roffs. Every effort is made to produce an annual which will represent both candidly and succinctly, the college life which we find surrounding us. The staff under the guidance of editor-in-chief and faculty advisor works energetically and self-sacrificingly to complete a yearbook of which the student body will be extremely proud.

Sodality

SURROUNDED, as we are, with a world of strife and confusion, it is refreshing, indeed, to see the young man . . . the leader of tomorrow . . . taking time to display homage to Mary, the Mother of God. The most rewarding sight, however, comes with active help . . . both in word and deed . . . for our missionaries working in distant lands. Indirectly, it is the donor of prayers and works who is in the field, helping his fellow man to find the truth in faith and the healthier way of life.

Science Clubs

SCIENCE HAS BEEN TERMED the handmaiden of progress. The universe, as we view it today, is a great macrocosm constructed of many diversified fields of science. Nations, through the use of scientific knowledge, are challenging each other for the lead in world affairs. At no time in history has science had such a significant importance. The students of Biology and Chemistry today will be the material crutches of the world tomorrow. What better way can we conceive our situation, in matter, than with the exploring eye of the scientist . . . he who seeks after knowledge?

Social Science

WE HAVE SEEN the importance of material science to the world today, but what of the intangible sciences of human relations? Nothing is more changing in our cosmos than the human being. As our theme we have chosen "orientation", however, without our human nature in its continual state of flux, there would be no need for our orientation . . . we would be, as it were, completely organized to our everyday occurrences. The political and economic scene is the direct result of interaction between nations, nations composed of individuals. A better understanding of these sciences of human relations cannot but lead to a better way of life.

MAN IS NOT merely a creature of soul with intellect and will but has a material body which must be taken into consideration. No one will deny the truth of the old adage: all work and no play makes Jack a dull boy, no one is more emphatic today than the psychologist in stating that mental health correlates strongly with physical health. Our bodies are of utmost consequence to us. It is through these organisms that we learn, labor and love. Without the body there could be little, if any, knowledge of our relationships with other beings.
